Ahead of its May reopening, Hotel Lou Pinet, in the south of France, has unveiled a new spa partnership with beautician Martine De Richeville.

The hotel's Tata Harper spa will offer the Remodelage technique by Martine de Richeville, a non-invasive technique which is said to offer a younger, lighter and more energised silhouette.

The Tata Harper Spa is located in an intimate space designed to resemble a cave. It offers a facial gym treatment by Tata Harper as well as a high-end treatment menu including face and body rituals and a range of massages.

Kimberley Cohen, co-founder and artistic director at owners Maisons Pariente, said: "After an uncertain year, we look forward to welcoming guests back to our chic retreat and are delighted to have partnered with Martine de Richeville, adding this incredible premium experience to our spa."
