

Landscape designer
Libby Russell's
Somerset valley garden

A rare look inside a beautifully-preserved
Brooklyn brownstone

Suzie de Rohan
Willner of TOAST on the importance of

The
res
bra

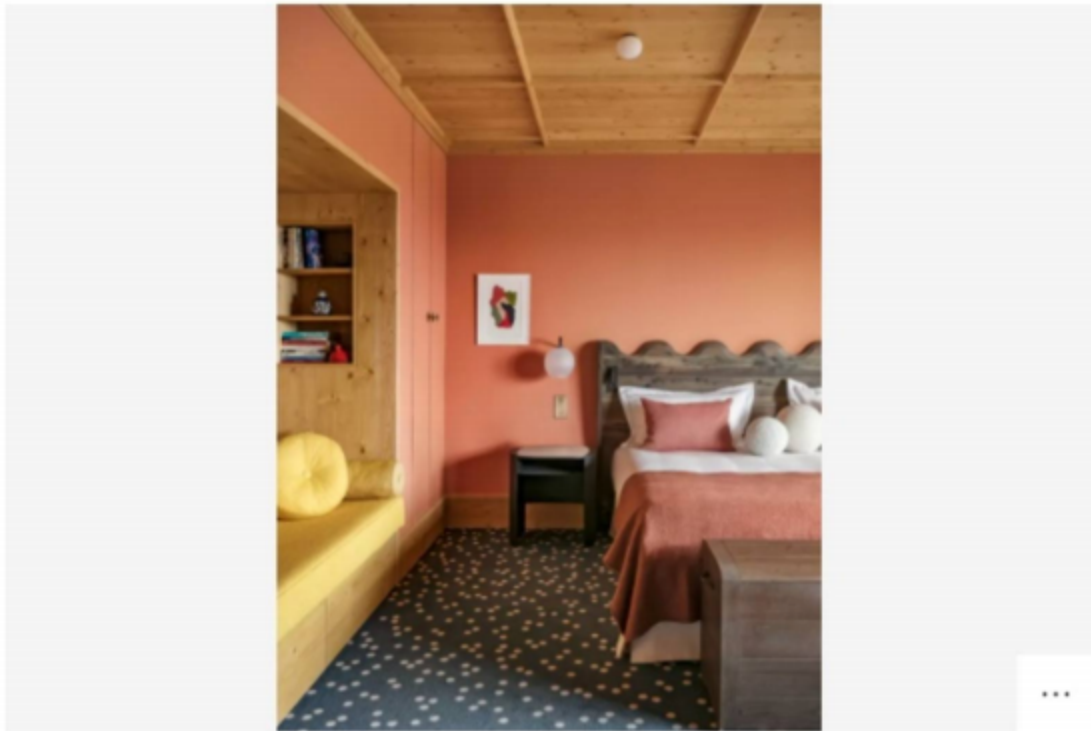

DESTINATIONS

10 extraordinary places we're dreaming about visiting

*While we may not be able to travel right now, that doesn't mean we can't dream of, or plan, holidays. Our travel editor Pamela Goodman introduces some of the dreamiest pictures from our Hotels by Design supplement, out now with our May issue, to inspire your future travels.*

When Hotels by Design went to press at the beginning of March the world was a different place. What has happened in the space of a mere four weeks is unfathomable and the catastrophic consequences now facing the travel industry - in all its shapes and forms - are terrifying to contemplate. So to celebrate the launch of Hotels by Design, published in conjunction with the May issue of House & Garden, seems a little flippant. But celebrate I must, if only as a thank you to all the hotels whose inspiring designs grace its pages, and to my colleagues on the magazine who worked with me on its production. A damp squib for sure, but a mightily beautiful one - and hopefully a welcome dose of armchair escapism to keep us all dreaming of better days to come."

*Read the Hotels by Design supplement in the May issue of House & Garden - FREE to download below.*

Interior architect Pierre Yovanovitch is responsible for the playful, contemporary look and feel of 55-room Le Coucou, a ski-in, ski-out hotel in Meribel from hotel group Maisons Pariente. Interiors are quirky, colourful and elegant.