A new year brings a new crop of design hotels to fill your Instagram feeds and provide you with all sorts of travel envy. And with a new decade having just arrived, now is an even more exciting time to explore the latest offerings and check a few aesthetically pleasing getaways off your bucket list.

Taking notice of the preferences of millennial travelers, many new hotels are hoping to attract a young and influential crowd with Instagram-worthy nooks and wellness programming. Some are even feeding into the current climate with their own social networks, available upon check-in. So whether you're seeking a quick weekend getaway in the Catskills, a week of alpine and après (let's be honest, mostly après) in the Swiss Alps, or a few days of Vitamin D with a dunk in the Caribbean, we've got you covered with the 10 best hotels you'll love in 2020- especially if you're a millennial.

Le Coucou (Méribel, France)

As if the ski-in-ski-out aspect of Le Coucou wasn't enough, world-renowned architect and interior designer, Pierre Yovanovitch created a modern oasis that reinterprets Alpine chic with his play on French minimalism, color, plaids, and wintery textures.
